Eddie - Just to clarify, is it your position that Mr. Bannon has been properly served with your purported filings and that the time for him to respond to your motions that have yet to be filed and yet to be acknowledged by the clerk's office has already started to run? If that is your position, can you please provide me with a citation to the rule, case, or statute which supports that most unusual interpretation?

Thanks,
Allison

Allison, thank you. As you know, we requested expedited briefing with responses due on specific calendar days, the first of which is next Thursday the 26th. Even if it takes the clerk's office time to process a miscellaneous action (which must be filed in paper, not on ECF, even though all of us will eventually get an ECF notice of the filing, so that ECF can be used from that point forward), our motion asks for a specific schedule and we've gotten you a true and correct copy of our filings. Thank you for acknowledging receipt of those filings, even though we recognize you're arguing that you have not been "served" for purposes of running the time under the local rules for a response.

Eddie

Eddie – You emailed us copies of pleadings and motions that had not been filed. We, therefore, have not been served with any operative documents that would trigger a responsive pleading or motion. Once you have actually filed your materials and those materials have been accepted by the clerk's office as evidenced by time and date stamps, we will be happy to accept service of those documents.

Best,
Allison

Allison, you were served yesterday, but the file stamp will be for today. You cannot file a miscellaneous action electronically, so the best we could do was to overnight it for filing today.

Thanks, Bekah. Can you clarify whether these documents filed with the court yesterday? If so, will you please send us copies of the versions stamped by the court?

Thanks,
Allison

Allison,

Once I receive the case number and filed versions I will send them. The clerk informed me that this type of case is not done electronically, so the package was sent via FedEx.

Thanks,
